The Romanian Prime Minister, Victor Ponta, says the government's plans to build a series of dams on the Danube and a larger canal to accommodate Russia's larger ships will be discussed in talks with the EU. Mr. Victor Ponta said: "I can tell you that we can change our situation for the better. We can create all the conditions for an economic upturn." "But we need EU help," he said, insisting that Romania's deficit was needed to convince the EU to send in a bailout. "If we have to beg, at least we beg for our kids and grandchildren." "We are not calling for outside help. We are looking for a way of self-help. But in order to have the capacity to do that, we need help from our EU partners." Romania's economy has been depressed by a long period of political instability, weak property prices and a large budget deficit. An economic crisis in 2012 was followed by the March 2014 street protests that derailed the ruling coalition's coalition plans to join the EU. In July 2014, Romania's public debt surpassed 130 percent of GDP, but later this year it is expected to be as high as 135 percent. "A European solution would have been possible a year ago, but it's much more complicated now," Mr. Ponta said. "In order to convince the EU, we need time." This week the government released a draft law that would rewrite the existing hydro-electric power sector to allow it to generate electricity from the Danube, which flows through Romania for more than 600 kilometers. Mr. Pont
