Sep 25, 2018 Oligokaryontik Parabelan: Penyakit Tepat Secara Struktur Molekuler - online file biologi sel dan molekuler pada tabletQ. How can I style a background image that fills the screen? I have a background image that I want to stretch or scale to fill the entire screen without resorting to absolute positioning. I tried: background-size: cover; And it didn't work. So I tried: background-size: 100%; And that works, except it leaves a 1 pixel margin at the bottom of the screen. That's obviously the browser's way of saying "that's it, browser, you win." How can I stretch the background image to fill the screen and be pixel perfect? A: The easiest way is probably to wrap your page inside a div with the style display: table and style the background of that div instead. DEMO: HTML Foo Bar CSS .wrap { display: table; width: 100%; height: 100%; } .item { display: table-cell; padding: 10px; } .item h1 { text-align: center; } Ask HN: Engineering productivity, what are the tools you use? - realExpat There has been lots of talk about how to track code and understand what an engineer is doing. What tools do you use to track your own code and how productive have you found these tools to be? ===== oblib I use a nice git GUI front end called SourceTree that is free and has a great viewing window. It's not even a question of tracking my code but using SourceTree, seeing where my commits are and where my branches are. It's great because I
