The present invention relates to a new and improved construction of a sprocket wheel for an endless track chain of a continuously variable transmission, which sprocket wheel is of the type comprising a hub to be driven by a driving engine and having a plurality of mutually spaced circular teeth with a hub gap between each tooth and the adjacent hub. The sprocket wheel is rotatably journaled in a hub-like supporting part and consists of a hard material. Such a sprocket wheel in the form of a hard-material sprocket wheel is already well-known to the art, for instance from the Swiss Pat. No. 614,317, granted Dec. 6, 1948, to Regensburger Maschinen- und Anlagenbau AG. As a rule, the hard material consists of a steel or carbide which contains one or more reinforcing inserts made of a high-strength material such as aluminum. In order to reduce the frictional wear and tear of the hard material during operation, the supporting part can be provided with solid material surfaces. Such a wear-resistant sprocket wheel is expensive and due to its relatively heavy mass when utilized in a continuously variable transmission has a relatively low efficiency. //
