Late systolic dysfunction in hypertensive patients with asymptomatic diastolic dysfunction: an E/E' of >13 predicts an abnormal pattern Doppler signal. Hypertension and diastolic dysfunction have emerged as leading causes of heart failure. We sought to identify risk factors for systolic dysfunction in hypertension with normal LV ejection fraction. Fifty-four consecutive hypertensive patients (systolic blood pressure >140 mmHg) who underwent echocardiography with the mitral annular plane systolic excursion (MPS) 13 for diastolic function assessment were compared with 24 age-matched normotensive controls. End-diastolic (ED)
