A: Just copy the registration code from the user guide, it will enable you to use it. The effect of sperm factors on the blastocyst stage of the preimplantation development of the rat. The effect of the spermatozoon and of its chromatin on blastocyst formation was studied in the preimplantation rat embryo. Injection of spermatozoa into one cell embryos at the 8-cell stage resulted in a significantly lower implantation rate in comparison with that of the controls, as did those of a chromatin fraction from 0.1 to 0.5 mg. Proteinase K (0.01%) significantly reduced the number of embryos with a chromatin concentration of
