Q: Display the grid of a view with a custom animation I am trying to animate a custom UIView that is loaded with a UITableView and UIScrollView. In my case, the view size is changing with a constant animation. What I've tried so far is to use: `[UIView animateWithDuration:0.6 animations:^(// Change the size of the UIView...

} completion:^(BOOL finished) { }];` but this way doesn't work. My problem is that I want to change the size of the UIView without changing the size of the parent view. If I use: `[UIView animateWithDuration:0.6 animations:^([self setFrame:CGRectMake(60.0f, -60.0f, self.frame.size.width, self.frame.size.height)]; }];` then the view size changes, but the scroll view also moves. How can I avoid this? A: In order to animate only the UIView itself, I would recommend moving the UIView that was created programmatically outside the container view (the UIScrollView/UITableView). This should allow you to move the UIView around the screen without moving the UIScrollView. In the example below, I've created a UIView called `anImageView` that is sized to 320x200 and added it as a subview to the UIScrollView. Then, I created a UIView called `aBox` that I animate to move to the top right corner of the UIScrollView, once the scrollView finishes scrolling. `UIView *anImageView =
[[UIView alloc] initWithFrame:CGRectMake(0, 0, 320 2d92ce491b`
