United StatesNa(+)-K(+)-ATPase activity in perfused microdissected portions of rat renal cortex. The effect of certain diuretics on ouabainsensitive (Na⁺ + K⁺)-adenosinetriphosphatase (ATPase) activity was investigated in microdissected portions of rat renal cortex. An active ouabain-sensitive ATPase activity was found in microdissected portions of the inner and outer medulla and in the superficial cortex. Diuretics had variable effects on the specific activity of Na(+)-K⁺ ATPase. The following results were obtained with the non-specific phosphatase inhibitor levamisole (10^{-3} M, 2 X 2 h), hydrochlorothiazide (10^{-3} M, 2 X 24 h) and ouabain (10^{-3} M, 48 h). The hydrochlorothiazide effect was present in both medulla and cortex. The effect of ouabain was present in both medulla and cortex with minimal effect in the outer medulla. The lack of an effect in the outer medulla may be due to the use of a 5-fold higher concentration than in the inner medulla. The effect of ouabain in the inner medulla was independent of the Na^+ content of the perfusing solution. These data provide evidence for a small component of $(\text{Na}^+ + \text{K}^+)\text{-ATPase}$ activity in the inner medulla that is not dependent on Na^+ gradient. The ouabain- 2d92ce491b
