It was the middle of winter, two thousand six. The day was sunny, and life was just being how it should. The village was quiet and peaceful, and life was good. Unfortunately, a nearby factory had a fire. The smoke and flames from the burning building spread quickly and affected the entire village. Thank god, no one was hurt, except for a few animals. Still, this could not change the fact that the factory was burnt to ashes. The factory could not be rebuilt. This was a fact. Yet, something was bothering me. The factory... I was only five years old when the factory burned down. I think I had a dream. Or maybe it was a dream. Did I see the factory burn? Did I really see it burn? I thought so, but I wanted to check, so I went to the valley. This is the place I was born. I may see the smoke and fire if I go to the right valley. I looked right... the smoke was there. I found no smoke at the valley. I had seen smoke. I knew for sure. It was the fire... the fire from the factory. I looked left... no smoke.

Very lifelike. On the other hand, there is only one or two places where there could be a problem with the unit. One is the fire, the unit is set up in a way that it is "fired up" at all times even when you are in

"continue" mode. This means that the unit will still be heating up and it will flicker. This doesn't cause any problem when viewing, but it was noticeable when there was a long period of inactivity. Fortunately, the unit also comes with a manual that allows you to decrease the energy that the unit uses. Another possible issue could be the fact that the unit is quite loud at full power. Again this was only noticed when the unit was inactive for a long period of time. Product Information Great minds; are they better or worse than average? Its story-driven design The story is where this app shines, and its creators have done a wonderful job by casting their characters in a medieval-looking world. It starts with an author who is
