This study compared regadenoson (N5-(2-[(4-cyanophenyl)methyl]-1,2-dihydro-2-oxo-1H-1,2,4-triazole-3-yl)-2'-deoxy-5'-O-ethyl beta-D-erythro-pentofuranosyl pyranoside) with currently approved adenosine triphosphate (ATP) receptor agonists in healthy volunteers. Twenty-four male and female healthy volunteers, 20-35 yr of age, participated in the study. The volunteers received i.v. bolus injections of regadenoson (2.0 microg/kg), adenosine (3.0 mg/kg), or dipyridamole (0.025 mg/kg). Pharmacodynamic measurements included heart rate (HR), blood pressure, and lipolysis. Pharmacokinetic parameters, such as the area under the plasma concentration-time curve from time zero to infinity (AUC infinity), were determined. After regadenoson and adenosine administration, heart rate, blood pressure, and lipolysis increased. There were no relevant changes after dipyridamole administration. Regadenoson showed a broader AUC-to-effect profile and a faster onset of effect than did adenosine. The half-life of regadenoson was approximately 20 min. Regadenoson showed a biphasic elimination after i.v. bolus injection. The observed bioavailability was 54%. After oral administration, reg
