While IndieGoGo has increased its ability to offer small projects $30,000 and up, the addition of a funding tier didn't set out to favour those less known. Instead, a quick look at projects displayed on the site reveals that the vast majority are either big-budget titles or talented teams with long and established track records. Not that the bar on the site is that high - just that in an age where developers can go independent with a very low financial risk, raising $45,000 to $300,000 is enough to play in a "professional sandbox". The site is also doing its job in attracting large investments for projects outside the gaming space. It has raised $8 million for a grant search engine. "This is a perfect example of a good problem to have," said one of the site's founders, creator of Google Search.

Minimally invasive local field-guided laser treatment of localized prostate cancer. Three novel laser techniques have been developed and tested in a randomized controlled study of primary treatment of localized prostate cancer. The first uses a contact-lens-based laser at 585 nm to treat the peripheral zone in a circular pattern; in the second the machine is moved in a figure-of-eight pattern to treat the transition zone; and the third uses a newly developed mixed-wavelength laser with two wavelengths to treat the peripheral zone. The geometric margin of excision is determined by a transrectal ultrasound (TRUS) probe. The extent of excision measured by the
