Windows Xp, Vista, Win7. .Q: Web user control in windows service I have created a Windows service which used to verify user credentials against some SQL Server table. I have a website (.Net MVC) which uses the above web user control. In the user control I use the following connection string to connect to the database: Now my question is, will it work when the user control is used in the Service and the Service is called by the website? Can I use that connection string in my windows service? or it must be called with different database name? Thank You, A: If the service is running in process (a console app doesn't make it any different), then you don't need to change anything. The same connection will work. If it's a Windows service, the connection string would need to be different.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a test method and apparatus of a semiconductor integrated circuit, and more particularly to a test method and apparatus of a semiconductor integrated circuit which test the function of a part of the integrated circuit by providing a test pattern signal input to a non-active input terminal of the part to thereby automatically
