After installing an nLite addon, you can now use your keyboard to perform a macro. All you need to do is to install the addon "Keymacro" and then run it. Keymacro will display the list of macros and assign them to the Ctrl key. A sequence of keystrokes can be easily made by holding down the Ctrl key and then typing the keys for the macro. For example: Ctrl+Alt+C: Open a command prompt window Ctrl+Alt+H: Open a Help window Ctrl+Alt+V: Open a search window Ctrl+Alt+F: Open a Find window Ctrl+Alt+M: Open a locate window Ctrl+Alt+G: Open a Go to folder window Ctrl+Alt+I: Open a insert menu Ctrl+Alt+D: Open a folder Ctrl+Alt+L: Open a last open window When you want to exit from the macro, just release Ctrl+Alt key. All new nLite versions will be compatible with all previous versions of Windows and will offer an easy update if they are used on a PC with previous Windows versions. You can also use the main Help utility to update your main Windows installation with a single click. This is faster than updates using the automatic updating system. These updates mainly make system improvements and features that you use. You will not have any effect on the way Windows is working in general. I have an important application that depends on Win7, so it is not updated when the new version of Linux is installed. I have had it like this for a long time, and I don't want to do any real changes to the system. On the other hand, I want to have a fast start time when using Linux (and especially Ubuntu, since I don't have a fast internet connection in my house). I can set Windows to boot faster by disabling all the services, and now I would like to do the same with Linux. Is it possible to disable services on Ubuntu to get a fast start, and if so, how? Thanks! I want to build a PC with Ubuntu and Windows 8.1, and I'm not 1d6a3396d6
