Category:Microsoft Office-related software BlackBerry will sell the Passport again soon, possibly starting in the fourth quarter, said the company's Chief Marketing Officer Frank Boulben on the company's earnings call. "We are planning on selling the Passport again," Boulben said. "We're still finalizing the timing as we get closer to launch." Boulben added that the company would not comment on pricing. The Passport is the first Blackberry phone that was popular, shipping 3.9 million units worldwide during its first year on the market in 2013. However, the phone failed to become a success and was discontinued after about three years, but now its manufacturer, BlackBerry, has said that it plans on selling it again. The company also said that it plans on launching a new phone this fall and that the Passport might be a good replacement for the older BlackBerry Bold. "BlackBerry continues to be a focus for RIM and we continue to believe that the market is saturated," said Jean Philippe Beaudoin, Chief Executive Officer of RIM, at the time of the company's earnings call. "With that in mind, we are reaffirming our focus on BlackBerry 10, the holiday season and our new product launches in the second half of the year."

Targeted gene disruption in flagellated protozoa: a novel approach for in vivo gene manipulation. The techniques for in vivo manipulation of gene sequences in various species of pathogenic protozoa, or the study of the function of gene products in their flagellated forms, have been severely hindered by the lack of convenient approaches for targeted gene disruption. In this review, we discuss recent advances that have been made in the development of gene targeting methods for use in the targeted disruption of genes in protozoa. We also describe a novel gene knockout system that has been developed for the protozoan Trypanosoma brucei. Finally, we briefly review the next challenges in the development of tools for gene manipulation in flagellated protozoa.

The critical need for female genital cutting/mutilation (FGC/M) services and the sustainability of such services are important issues among health care practitioners in developing countries. National FGC/M policies are crucial if the population is to have equal access to this essential healthcare. One such policy which has gained increasing attention in many developing
