What's New in the AutoCAD?

Apply a design template to a drawing. It's easy to configure a collection of templates that contain desired components, which you can apply to a drawing without re-creating a new one. (video: 1:19 min.) Add or update comments and notes to existing drawings. Select a drawing and note the changes you want to make, including comments, and then send the drawing to the customer. The customer returns the drawing and comments are updated. (video: 2:18 min.) Reference Design Enhancements: Add reference lines to a drawing. A single line or polyline can be converted into a series of reference lines, which can be used as temporary objects or as guides to indicate a path of movement. (video: 1:52 min.) Use custom line settings to control line color, line width, and line blending. Set line width and color, and specify line blending to blend the line with the background or another line. (video: 2:28 min.) Generate a sequence of drawings and connect them in a sequence. Design a new drawing and import the drawing into the sequence by using the "Import as New Drawing" or "Move to New Drawing" command. (video: 2:01 min.) Symbol Set Insertion for a Sketch Use symbol set insertion to insert a drawing in a different part of the drawing space than the drawing you selected. This feature makes it possible to quickly insert a small drawing into a large one, or to insert a drawing that has been created with a different tool into a drawing created with AutoCAD. (video:

2:40 min.) Boundary Layer Use a boundary layer to prevent drawing outside the boundary of a drawing, component, or array. A boundary layer can be applied to one or more objects or components. (video: 2:53 min.) Create a robust, multilevel sketch using the boundary layer. Bring the boundary layer to the entire working area, not just to a single layer. Then sketch the area, using the boundary layer to prevent the sketch from being drawn outside the boundary of the whole drawing. (video: 2:54 min.) Intersect Objects Intersect objects to join them at their closest point of intersection. You can use this command to join objects that are close to one another but not exactly coincident. The intersection point is calculated automatically. (
