Preparing Your Images Before you can start to design and create your web pages, you need to create and arrange the graphics, called `assets` in the art biz, that will make up your site. Assets include graphics, images, animation, and video. The process of creating images for a web site looks something like this: 1. Start with images that don't need to be changed. Included in this group are graphics that are intended to remain static on a page. These are the ones that web browsers simply see —the kind of graphics like a logo or a graphic you need for a tagline. In web design, the goal is to create images that are unlikely to change in order to save time when you're making adjustments to the other graphics on a

"He's a digital illustrator. He's a big fan of Photoshop. He's very talented, and he's got a great personality. It's kind of, you know, a geekish sense of humor. He's funny and he has a positive energy and he's fantastic to work with, and I love him, and that makes this year really special." What's New In Adobe Photoshop CC 2015 Version 17?

In a display device employing liquid crystals or an electrophoretic display (EPD), a display substrate (thin film transistor array substrate) and a counter substrate (color filter substrate) are arranged to face each other, and a spacer is provided between these two substrates to keep a gap between the two substrates constant. The spacer is a body that is formed through a step of applying a photo-curable resin in a certain shape on a surface of the substrate, and a final cure is performed to form a columnar spacer. The spacer is generally formed through a photolithographic technique. For example, Patent Document 1 (Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2008-145798) discloses a technique that makes it possible to easily form a spacer having a sufficiently small height and a sufficiently large area by using a simple process, and that also makes it possible to reduce variations in height of the spacer, by increasing the area of a light-shielding film located in the vicinity of a pixel and formed over the entire periphery of a screen, so that resin in the vicinity of a light-shielding film on the light-shielding film, and resin in the vicinity of a spacer columnar portion are cured at the same time. For example, in a display device such as a liquid crystal display device, it is important to reduce display defects due to leakage of light or foreign matter. As a conventional method for covering a spacer with a sealing layer in order to achieve the above, a sealing layer has been formed in the vicinity of the spacer between a substrate and a sealing substrate in the past. However, in recent years, a method that has been developed for covering a spacer with a sealing layer, a method in which a light-shielding film is formed on the entire periphery of a screen as a film having a function of light-shielding, and resin is cured by irradiating light through a light-shielding film on the light-shielding film, in a sealing layer, has been disclosed (for example, Patent Document 2, Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2010-020465). Further, in a conventional display device, a spacer is formed through a photolithographic technique. A photolithographic technique involves formation of a film of a photo-curable resin on a substrate, and then ultraviolet irradiation of the resulting substrate with specified light, and subsequent cleaning and development.
