Q: UITableViewCell with custom subclass not loaded properly I'm using a custom subclass of UITableViewCell as suggested in the Apple Developer Library and found here I modified the methods's body to use my custom subclass instead of the default one. I also modified the h file #import "CustomCell.h" #import "CustomCell.h" #import "AppDelegate.h" I'm trying to load the custom subclass on a UITableView for a UIPickerView just to make sure it's working. This is how I load the custom cell to the picker's cell: @implementation CustomPickerTableViewController @synthesize customPickerCell = _customPickerCell; - (UITableViewCell *)tableView:(UITableView *)tableView cellForRowAtIndexPath:(NSIndexPath *)indexPath { if ([tableView isEqual:UITableView]) _customPickerCell = [tableView dequeueReusableCellWithIdentifier:@"customCell"]; else _customPickerCell = (CustomPickerTableViewCell *) [tableView dequeueReusableCellWithIdentifier:@"customCell"]; [_customPickerCell setCustomPickerCellView:picker]; // Configure the cell... return _customPickerCell; } For some reason, the cell's content doesn't show up and this is what I see inside the debugger: CustomPickerTableViewCell - (id)initWithStyle:(UITableViewCellStyle)style reuseIdentifier:(NSString *)reuseIdentifier { self = [super initWithStyle:style reuseIdentifier:reuseIdentifier]; if (self) { // Custom initialization } return self; } - (id)initWithCoder:(NSCoder *)aDecoder { self = [super initWithCoder:aDecoder];
