The Asus Zenfone Max Pro M1 comes with a microSD slot, supporting up to 32 GB of storage. There are many reasons why Windows Phone has had a difficult time in the US. The main problem is that Microsoft chose to make it difficult for carriers to get into the smartphone game. In the end it just gives carriers no incentive to offer Windows Phone. While there is a chance of some kind of deal that will change things, I've got my fingers crossed. The deal between Google and Verizon is going to be huge for Windows Phone. It's the first time a US carrier, a very important one at that, has agreed to offer Windows Phone devices. This is huge for Microsoft, a number of Microsofts executives are Verizon employees. The upside for Microsoft is that Verizon will probably start building Windows Phones. You see, Microsoft has spent a lot of money in making the manufacturing of Windows Phones difficult for manufactures. They are the ones that make the hardware, software, and deals with carriers. Android and iOS comes together to make a common product. It was a lot of work to make that happen. Microsoft has a better product to go with than it has had in the past, but it's still hard to sell and manufactures will be hesitant. 648931e174
