Calibrating the Monitor It's important to know how the monitor you use for your Photoshop work affects the output. I do this by trying to align my tools across the image I'm working on while testing on my calibrated screen, because my screen is always right in front of me. It's much more difficult to do this if your monitor is not calibrated. Get a good screen. Many of the tutorials available on Photoshop for new users offer good advice on which screens to get for your daily work. I recommend spending a little more money and getting a professional quality screen. Calibrate your monitor. Calibrating your monitor is a matter of removing any color shifts from your screen, including any drift and adjustment of the blue and red colors you see. Many people who use Photoshop for editing will calibrate their monitors and use the monitor calibration dialog (see Figure 5-5). I use the Adobe Profiler (www.adobe.com/profiler/) for calibrating Photoshop, which I prefer over the Adobe calibration tool. There are many programs that can do this type of calibration, including Calibration Tools (www.hoff.com/calibration), California Sunrise (www.pizsoft.com/calibration), and ColorZone (www.coloringzone.com/calibration.asp). Use Calibrate Photoshop. If you have Photoshop 6, 7, or 8, open the Color Management system and click on the Profile drop-down menu (it's just below the Standard tab, as shown in Figure 5-5). If you don't see it, click on the Show Advanced Options button and choose

Q: Initialize a class in a.wxml file then call the method in QML In some classes in Qt.cpp files I have to use a function called BuildProperty. I got this function to call from.cpp files using Q_INVOKABLE. In.QML files I want to use this method but there I can't initialize the class that needs it. I know it has to do with the way a.QML file works. E.g.: QT_BEGIN_NAMESPACE class Foo{ public: Foo() {} void someMethod(); }; QT_END_NAMESPACE Q_INVOKABLE void someFunction(int a, int b){ Foo myFoo; myFoo.someMethod(a,b); } But I want to be able to initialize this class in a.wxml file like so: Is this even possible? Thanks in advance. A: Use Q_INVOKABLE for writing such things in QML, it is for this purpose. If you need to implement some native functionality in a.cpp file you can use Q_CLASSINFO macro. See e.g. this answer for an example. .
