Image Management EXAM TIP Never delete a layer or Photoshop image by mistake! It is a terrible idea to have so many files on your computer and the Internet that you will lose all your editing power if your hard drive crashes or your system is overworked. You can have as many layers as you want and as many Photoshop images as you can fit on your computer. If you're working with a laptop, you don't need as many as you'd like, but most people have desktop computers or other small and large devices that fit everything they work on. The basic location for images is in your _photography folder_ or _photo album_, _and_ on your computer. This discussion will assume that you are using a folder. You can also store images in the _My Pictures_ or _My Documents_ folder on your system. # The Photography Folder The first type of folder you need to learn is the _photography folder_. Photoshop has the ability to do a lot of things when you load an image into a new document, and that ability gives you a lot of opportunity to create and manage a large number of images. But you need to know where to find those images to be able to do all this. ## Using the Photoshop Image Folder In the earlier version of Photoshop, you could drag images from the Windows Explorer into the _New_ folder_ and add them to the existing Photoshop document. If the document is open, the image is loaded

Make your brushes more specific by grouping them into collections. Grouping allows you to apply a brush preset to a particular type of style. You can create an action that automatically applies a brush preset to a given command. For example, you can create an action that automatically paints on a canvas using the default brush preset. If you want to understand more about the Brush panel, this guide shows you how to read brush presets and control brush behavior. As you write your own brush presets or create actions, you can modify their behavior with the Options bar. Here, you can change brush properties, like size, opacity, hardness, spacing, rotation and resolution. Scroll through the other sections in this guide to learn about each brush category. But, what if you don't want to learn? You can open the Brush Browser to browse for brushes and download them. Later, you can create your own brush sets in Photoshop Elements. Let's look at how you can create a custom brush. As you can see, the type of brush determines whether it has a feather, size, opacity, shape, gradient, or other properties. It also has a brush name and a category (Stroke, Paint, etc.). For example, if you click the Stroke category in the Brush Browser, you can see a collection of strokes that behave similarly. Let's create a custom brush. In Photoshop, open the Brush tool and select New Brush. Give your brush a name, select the type of stroke you want, and then click OK. You can also choose the opacity of your brush, the size of the brush tip, and the shadow around the brush tip. You can also change the size of the brush tip by selecting the Size option on the Options bar. You can choose a Hardness setting to determine how closely your brush tip can be packed. A Hardness setting of 0% means the tip will be the same width as the brush. A Hardness setting of 100% means the brush tip is fully packed, which means it won't spread when you draw a stroke. You can also change the spacing, rotation and resolution of your brush tip. As you can see, the brush properties work together. For example, the Soften option helps your brush tip change size when you draw a line. The Spacing property lets you determine how much the brush tip is compressed when you press the pen button. The Brush tip rotation lets you determine how

Q: Free-floating in CSS I have a paragraph that I want to move to another line. In order to do this, I need to make that paragraph to be free-floating. Here is the HTML: Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet, consectetur adipiscing elit, sed do eiusmod tempor incididunt ut labore et dolore magna aliqua. This is how it looks right now: And this is how I want it to look (simply moved to another line): How can I do that? A: You can use float:left and text-align:justify to place a paragraph on the second line: .body p { float:left; text-align:justify; } 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a joint structure for a vehicle wheel and, more particularly, to a joint structure for a vehicle wheel having a hub member which is mounted to a vehicle body and to a rotary member which rotates with respect to the hub member. 2. Description of the Related Art In conventional wheels, a hub member is fixedly mounted to a vehicle body, and a rotary member is freely rotatably mounted to the hub member so as to form a wheel. As a result, the wheel may be easily disassembled. For example, when a wheel is mounted to a vehicle body, the axial position of the wheel may be adjusted to some degree with respect to the vehicle body by fitting a threaded portion of a nut which is disposed on an outer surface of the wheel to a threaded portion of a bolt which is disposed on an inner surface of the vehicle body, loosening and then tightening a nut, or by providing a clamping part which is disposed on the vehicle body and clampingly receives the wheel, for example, as disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,309,773. However, when an inner surface of the wheel is designed to mate with a vehicle body with a certain degree of freedom of angular rotation with respect to a vehicle body, a clearance between the hub member and the rotary member tends to increase, and a torque increases. Accordingly, the present
