Layers In the Layers window (refer to Figure 17-1) you create all the different layers of a file. Figure 17-1: The Layers window lets you apply effects, edits, and layers to any number of images. Instead of editing files in the same way all the time, you can apply an effect, change an image's color, crop the image, add a layer, and so on. You can use any number of steps and manage them and their effects in one window. The Layers window has two panes — the Layers panel at the top and the Layer 1 panel at the bottom (refer to Figure 17-1). The Layers panel, shown in Figure 17-1, is divided into a number of sections. The Layers thumbnail shows you the currently selected layers. You can add or remove multiple layers, lock and free layers, and move and duplicate layers.

The following list contains all the options available in Photoshop Elements. It doesn't include the built-in features of the software. 1. Image Adjustments The Adjustment panel appears when you activate it in the View menu. This panel will let you change the exposure, contrast, brightness, contrast and colours of the image. To adjust the image, click on the tab of the adjustment you want to apply, drag the slider until it is as you want it to be, and release the mouse button. The key features of this adjustment panel are: Adjustment layers Removing highlights Adjusting highlights Removing shadows Adjusting shadows Adjustment curves Adjustment curves Contrast Brightness Contrast Saturation Highlights Shadows Light Color Selective colour Vibrance Adobe Photoshop Elements provides good quality image adjustments. The only problem is that you need to use an image with good contrast to get the best image adjustments. With the Adjustment layers, you can apply multiple adjustment layers to a photo. You can apply each adjustment layer independently to create unique effects. Each adjustment layer can also be removed easily. You can create a new adjustment layer by clicking on Layer -> New adjustment layer Removing highlights and shadows This adjustment layer will improve the contrast of the image. It reduces the highlights and the shadows. You can also remove either the highlights or the shadows. To remove a highlight click on Layer -> Adjustment -> Brightness/Contrast -> Remove highlights. To remove a shadow click on Layer -> Adjustment -> Shadows/Highlights -> Remove shadows. This adjustment layer will help to create a more natural-looking image and help to reduce the amount of shadows in the image. To apply the adjustment, drag the slider until you get the contrast you like. You can also remove the adjustment by dragging the slider back to zero. Adjusting highlights and shadows In the Adjustments panel, you can adjust highlights and shadows separately. Click on the tab marked Highlights and Shadows and adjust the slider until you get the results you want. Adjustment curves The Adjustment curves let you adjust the brightness and contrast of an image. There are two adjustment curves, one for brightness and one for contrast. An Empirical Investigation of How Mentor's Face and Voice Influence Attitudes about Mentoring in Nanoscience: A Comparison Study. Although social psychology has long established that appearance and voice are important aspects of one's inner self, there are few analogous studies within the realm of teaching. The present study employs a non-randomized cross-over design to examine participants' attitudes towards a potential mentor after viewing a photograph of their face or reading their voice. Participants (n = 60) rated each person on a series of relevant personality traits and behaviors including qualities of interest, teaching ability, and mentorship. Results demonstrate that both face and voice influence attitudes about mentorship. The effect of face appears stronger than that of voice, with faces appearing to be more credible motivators of mentorship. Results are discussed in terms of their implications for the facilitation of effective mentorship and for understanding perceptions of potential mentors.A comparison of methods to report sensitivity and specificity estimates in case control studies. The quality of the literature on case-control studies and the extent to which they are inappropriately conducted is poorly documented. Twenty case-control studies published in a medical journal were examined to provide examples of the methods used to report data on (1) cases-sensitivity, (2) controls-sensitivity, (3) cases-specificity, and (4) controls-specificity. A systematic comparison of the methods used in the 20 case-control studies revealed that the authors used a wide variety of methods in the reporting of their study findings. Although the basic conclusions of these studies are not likely to be invalidated by their use of different reporting methods, readers of case-control studies are more likely to conclude that the reported methods do not permit them to be compared in a consistent manner. This lack of consistency in reporting was increased by the fact that most of the studies showed little consideration of what must be known before comparisons could be made and that many reported only measures of association using bivariate analysis of unmatched groups. We conclude that improvements in the reporting of case-control studies can be achieved by using standard terms and methods (e.g., tables for sensitivity and specificity) and by clearly stating the assumptions that underlie the comparisons.(1) Field of the Invention This invention relates to a nonvolatile semiconductor memory device capable of electrically programing and erasing data, and a method of manufacturing

How to reinvent 80's "hi-tech" for anyone? - noserhino ====== noserhino One of the biggest frustrations I have, which is most visible on the web where they use outdated approaches like slideshow, pop ups etc. is the incredible amount of time it takes to load page. While there are several reasons why this is the case, I believe the biggest inefficiency is JavaScript/jQuery. For example take this pop up example: anyo... As you can see, the whole page is rendered via JavaScript and jQuery. You can do it dynamically on the server, but is there any way to make it with native browser features? Q: Is this a matchstick of a homework I'm supposed to do (homework in progress) I am in the middle of a homework project and I'm not supposed to look at my assignment and try to copy it before the deadline of today. I went to my professor's class room and he was at a meeting with a few others. He went to the other class room in the building and I followed him. He showed the last homework assignment he had done and the assignment was for a multiple choice question with a difficulty of medium. He claimed he is stuck on the last question. After he showed me what he was looking at, I got confused. I saw one girl in the class room and later he went to the next room and I just saw his back and heard him ask for a pen. How long should I wait for him before I start to look at the homework assignment and start doing my assignment? A: This behavior is completely normal. Highly-productive students will look at their homework before class, even if it means making a mistake. The behavior might not be motivated by the prospect of a high score. Low
